

On January 12, 2006, Governor Codey signed the legislation (S-2481) that permits minors (someone who is at least 13 years of age) the authority to consent to medical care if the minor believes that he or she may be infected with HIV or AIDS. This law enables minors to be able to seek and test for HIV without parental consent.